Mamluks were defeated at HAJJ DUBIQ
The Ottoman empire incorporates Syria & Egypt. In the opening yrs of the 16th Cen.
a fanatical Shi'a sect from the southern shores of the Caspian Sea won a series of great military victories.

Sultan Salim advanced into Syria in 1516 and at the great battle of Hajj Dabiq (north of Aleppo), Turkish janissaries or infantrymen and Artillery, overwhelmed the Mamluk Army. In 1517, Cairo also fell. The last Mamluk sultan, Tuman Bey, was executed and Egypt & Syria were absorbed into the Ottoman empire. As a class, the Mamluks were not destroyed. They kept their lands (some local rulers even retained private armies) and during the Ottoman decline of the 18th century, recaptured some power and influence. They were eventually extinguished by Napoleon's invasion of Egypt in 1798.
